

How can we develop an effective microbicide?

Dr Allen Zhiwei Wu
Professor & Director
Center for Public Health Research
Nanjing University, China

Abstract

An effective microbicide can be an important alternative to preventative approach in containing HIV/AIDS epidemic, particularly in view of the repeated setbacks in vaccine development. However, the first generation of microbicides tested in human efficacy trials has been proven disappointment.

Creative thinking and innovative technologies are needed for developing an effective microbicide.